Update: FSA has been working aggressively to implement the new not-for-profit servicers. Through January 2012 we have brought up three entities representing 13 not-for-profits. We currently have an additional 22 not-for-profits slated to go live through mid-2013. As we have gained experience with this process, however, we have learned that our original schedule did not fully accommodate the level of effort required to bring up servicers in a way that minimizes risks for borrowers, FSA, and the not-for-profits themselves. Accordingly, we have revised the implementation schedule moving forward to better reflect experience to date, allow not-for-profits and their subcontractors more time to meet federal requirements, and minimize risks to borrowers.
